

Moore village contains-within its area-two Park Home sites with mainly elderly people. An increase in houses on the border with Warrington will produce an increase in traffic on Runcorn Road and as a consequence an increase in noise and pollution.

The Moore Nature Reserve looks like it will disappear with the development of Port Warrington.

The Nature Reserve provides a place to relax and study wildlife.

It enhances everyone's quality of life – surely something Local Authorities should seek to achieve.

The land around Runcorn Road is extremely fertile and I believe essential for future farming use. Especially as we leave the European Union and the need to produce more of our own food becomes necessary.

Good farmland is not easy to find and should be protected for future generations.

Even now at peak times Runcorn Road becomes very busy.

Any problems on local motorways invariably creates a log jam.

Local Authorities whilst needing to provide housing should not lose sight of the increased quality of life produced by natural areas.

When small villages are impacted by developments there needs to be some form of a buffer zone area.

Green areas should be the last space that Local Authorities use: because once lost they will be lost forever.

Regards.
