Hi,

We have just found out from neighbours that there is a proposal to build an 8000 house estate surrounding Grappenhall Village, so called Warrington Garden City Suburb.

We are absolutely amazed and extremely disappointed that we have received absolutely no information from Warrington Borough Council about this, and to the best of my knowledge no one else in the area has either. People are finding out by word of mouth and everyone is understandably concerned and angry about this. Surely you have a legal or at the very least moral responsibility to advise us of something that would have such a major impact on our lives?

Understandably people are drawing the conclusion that this lack of information is a deliberate ploy to ensure as few people as possible have their say during the consultation period. The fact that this is taking place during school holidays when lots of people are away also suggests the same thing.

Can you please let us know why we have not been advised and also how likely it is that this will go ahead, and when it would be likely to happen.

Thanks,
